

Body Riddle

A clock can have a face
And hands to tell the time.
A chair can have two arms
But not like yours or mine.
A table has a leg
But it doesn't have a knee.
A needle has an eye
And yet it cannot see.
A river has a mouth
That never says a word.
Corn grows high in ears
But not a sound is heard.

Questions about the poem.

1. What kind of clock does not have hands or a face?
2. Do all chairs have arms?
3. What other part of the human body do all chairs have?
4. What is a needle eye used for?
5. Can you name the five senses?
6. What other words rhyme with 'see?'

7. Can you think of an object that has teeth?
8. Can you think of an object that has a tongue?
9. What other parts of the body can be shared with objects?
10. Can you write the next two lines of the poem with any other parts of the body?